The town of El Borge is situated at the foot of the Cerro de Cutar mountain, on the border of the Axarquía and Montes de Málaga comarcas, and is known as the "raisin capital" because the town is one of the largest producers of Muscatel raisins. El Borge has some degree of notoriety as the birthplace of one of the most famous bandits in 19th-century Málaga province. Luis Muñoz García, known as the Bizco de El Borge, was born here. Today, his birthplace has been converted into a rural hotel with a small museum dedicated to banditry. The town is located 24km from Vélez-Málaga (the capital of the comarca) and about 28km from Málaga City. It only takes around 15 minutes to get to the Torre del Mar and Rincon de la Victoria beaches from El Borge.
